Warble Control in Cattle

It is unusual to be writing about this in the fall but the development and release of a new insecticide should interest farmers. This product is called Co-Ral and it is a systemic insecticide which can be sprayed on to the animal. Spraying should be done during September and October. The use of a high pressure sprayer is recommended in order to properly wet the skin of the animal. The per animal cost of this treatment may seem high but it must be remembered that this type of treatment should eliminate all the damage done by warbles to the animal and so you will get better gains and less time and trimming loss when the animals go to market. Calves under three months old and milking cows should not be treated.

This appears to be the type of warble control we have been wanting so stockmen should investigate it and at last try it on some of their cattle.

Rat Control

This program is still going on and it is being very effective. At this time of year rats are looking for winter quarters so everyone along the Saskatchewan border or within a few miles of it should be more alert than ever. Clean, tidy buildings sites help to discourage rats. Bait kept out at all times will likely kill any which wander in without you ever seeing them. Any sign or suspicion of rats should be reported immediately to your Pest Control Officer. We have proved that rats can be controlled, let's keep up the good work.

Feed Supplies

Hay is going to be scarce in some parts of the district. Anyone with a surplus which will be for sale can write me, giving me the quantity and price asked so that I will have a list of feed available. Anyone needing hay can contact me, letting me know what and how much they need. This is an information service only. I will not be buying and selling hay.

CAR MISHAP SOUTH OF BRUCE

A car mishap, 11 miles south of Bruce, involving two cars containing several persons occurred over the weekend. One of the passengers was Louis Brisard who is in the Viking hospital with two broken legs, the others, whose names are not obtainable at time of going to press, are in the Daysland hospital.

Last year family allowance payments cost $437.9 million, compared to $397.5 million one year earlier and $356.2 million five years earlier. Estimate for the current year is $470 million.

Weekly Inspirational Corner

(Sponsored by an Irma Times reader)

Whoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God; and every one that loveth Him that beget loveth him also that is begotten of Him.

By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep His commandments.

For this is the love of God, that we keep His commandments: and His commandments are not grievous.

For whatsoever is born of God, overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God? —1 John 5:1-5

BASEBALL BANTER

The final series of the Northwestern Utilities Baseball League continues here Sunday, starting at 2 p.m. Viking goes into the third game with a 2-0 lead over the Vegreville club. Two games will be played. The first, a nine-inning contest, will count as part of the series and the second game, only seven innings, will be an exhibition encounter.

By the way, the Viking Shamrocks were the winners of the League at the end of the regular schedule. They finished with 17 points, 8 points ahead of Vegreville. Two Hills finished last with only one win in the regular league play.

An early harvest has made it possible for the Viking Baseball Club to sponsor one last baseball tournament to wind up the 1958 season. It is not quite definite what four teams will be playing for the prize money, but every effort is being made to get good teams. So that's Sunday, September 14, for the last ball game of the year. Keep this date in mind.

TRIP TO ALASKA

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Overby had a lovely motor trip to Anchorage, Alaska, during the month of July when they visited with their daughter and husband there.

Their meter tallied 2,040 miles one way. The entire road was quite good, mostly gravel, and dusty and due to the sharp rocks is hard on tires, although they were fortunate at only having one tire to repair. They were very impressed with the Peace River country—very flat, low lying country and good crops. Getting into B.C. and all along the way there are numerous streams and rivers for excellent fishing, mainly salmon and greyling and other kinds also. There are also numerous taverns, eating places and cabins along the entire route. In the Yukon, the mountains are mostly all snow-clipped, coming down into ice fields at the bottom—this country is very rugged and rocky.

Along the way are Indian graves over which little houses, about 5'x7' and 4' high are built. Apparently the Indians leave smoking tobacco, etc. inside these houses in case the deceased want to come and have a smoke. Things are more expensive here—paying as high as 61c a gallon for gas; 20c a cup for coffee and 40c for a piece of pie. There are also hot springs both in the Yukon and Alaska.

In Alaska things are cheaper, clothing about the same, but bread is 49c a loaf, fresh eggs as high as 90c - $1.05 a dozen. Frozen eggs come shipped in for about 40c a dozen.

Around Anchorage the climate is very nice, being built on an inlet off the Pacific Ocean. There are many beautiful lakes and gardens. There is a natural lake in the city of Anchorage as a number of people have their own private pontoon planes and they use these for fishing on the ocean. The main sports are stock car racing, bowling and fishing.

They also visited with Mrs. A. Millar of Palmer, Alaska, her sisters being Mrs. Bob Meakins and Mrs. Harry Meakins here at Jarrow.

On their return trip they were delayed a day because of the forest fires. They drove about 60 miles through the smoke which is very black, making it as dark as night. Otherwise they had a very pleasant trip and are certain anyone making the trip would really enjoy it.

FIRST PRIZE $1,000 CASH

CALGARY—More than 50 cash prizes will be awarded soon to prairie farmers by a Canadian fertilizer firm. A $3,000 cash prize contest, open to residents of Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and the Peace River District, has been announced by the makers of Elephant Brand Fertilizers.

The summer seems to have gone so fast and school days are here again.

The Irma School opened on Tuesday with 290 pupils enrolled—an increase of 20 over last year.

The following young folk are in the beginners' class this year: Myrna Meier, Shiela McRoberts, Bobbie Smallwood, Eva Thurston, Edith Ford, Patricia Kirkman, Harvey Haun, Gordon Savard, Billy McBurney, Sandra Lawson, Dwayne Miles, Eddie Ford, Terry Russell, Linda Raud, Beverly Anne Burr, Bobbie Raud, Dale Ploker, Barry McKee.

They are being pleasantly instructed by Mrs. George Fischer.

Card of Thanks

I wish to thank all those who visited me while I was in Col. Mewburn Hospital, also the WI for flowers and the old friends for smokes and get-well cards. All was appreciated very much.

LEAVING ALL TO FOLLOW

In Matthew, chapter 13, we have the record of seven parables which Jesus taught concerning the kingdom of heaven. Two of them emphasize the value of the kingdom. Here they are: "Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field. Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking pearls: who when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it."

In each case the man sold all that he had in order to gain the treasure. That, is exactly what everyone must do to enter into the kingdom of heaven. The rich young ruler, an earnest seeker for eternal life, was told, "Sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, follow me." And when he heard this, he was very sorrowful; for he was very rich. Luke 18: 22. Of course, we all know people who did not dispose of all their possessions when they became disciples of Jesus Christ. But certainly their possessions now took a secondary place. Jesus Christ must have first place. Paul wrote, "But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in him . . ." Philippians 3: 7-9.

The best bargain one ever makes is when he surrenders all that he may have. Jesus Christ "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." 1 Timothy 4: 8. Many try to be Christians without yielding all. It's a frustrating experience. "A double minded man is unstable in all his ways," James 1: 8.

He who has been forgiven and has consecrated his all to Jesus Christ is enjoying the best that God can give.

CROWD GOES WILD OVER WRESTLING ANTICS

Westing made its debut recently before a small crowd when a four-bout match was staged in the Glenboro rink.

Right from the first bell when Bob Jones and Ed Tardy tangled in the opening match, the crowd was thrilled with the varied antics of the wrestlers. Ed Tardy was the choice of the fans but he succumbed to the villain, Bob Jones, after 27 minutes of grueling battle. — The Gazette, Glenboro, Man.

HOUSEWIFE DECIDES

Once in a while, a person who has been laid off for lack of work will argue with sincere conviction that poor times, or recessions or depressions are planned by "the bosses." A moment's thought will remind anyone that "the bosses" do best when goods sell easily at good prices.

The housewife is one person who has much to do with prosperity, or lack of it. If she decides not to spend, or to spend less, on luxuries or the more expensive kinds of food, or not to buy a new stove, her decision is noted by boards of directors, whom she causes furiously to think.

All who have to do with the making and marketing of goods and services should always remember that the housewife has views on quality, kind, style and price.—The Printed Word.

Cake decorating man's hobby

"Decorating wedding cakes and anniversary cakes for my friends and neighbors is a hobby with me," remarked Jack Smith, a farmer of the Glamis, Sask., district, shown putting the final touches to a cake he had baked and decorated himself.

Mr. Smith was the lone male entrant among 19 in a special competition for decorated wedding cakes sponsored by Federated Co-operatives Ltd. at the Saskatoon Industrial Exhibition. Entries were received from points as far distant as Headingly, Man., and competition was so keen that the judges required nearly four hours to arrive at their decision. "Decorating a cake usually takes about a week of spare time," Mr. Smith told an interviewer in Saskatoon. "I guess this one must have taken about twenty hours altogether." He added, pointing to the beautifully decorated cake he was entering in the competition. "This is one hobby that doesn't cost me much, for the people who want me to decorate cakes usually pay me for the cost of materials." He went on. "My other hobby is color photography—I always take a colored picture of my cakes."

Use for old cards

Mrs. Leona Hays in her spare time has found use for out-dated Christmas and greeting cards. She has evolved a six-sided sewing or work basket which is all decorated and sewn with crocheted cotton to make a pleasing effect. This basket has a lid and all Mrs. Hays will be glad to show friends what use can be made of discarded cards. — The Wilkie, Press, Wilkie, Sask.

SUPPORT LOCAL MERCHANTS

SALUTE TO NATO: Flags of the NATO nations, flanking the banner of the organization itself, wave in the breeze on the tarmac of RCAF Station Winnipeg, Manitoba, where Canada's NATO training plan officially ended last week. During the eight years it has been in force, more than 5,000 pilots and navigators from 10 other NATO nations were trained alongside their RCAF counterparts. This training was to provide a nucleus of trained fliers about which the initial bulk of the nations' air forces was to take place. This task has been completed for the majority, but under separate agreements, aircrew from three of the original 10 countries and those from West Germany will continue to be trained in Canada. IT'S BACK TO SCHOOL for these school teachers. G. D. McPeck of Coronach conducts a summer workshop on string instruments.

Teachers attend unique music school at Fort Qu'Appelle

A new legend is growing up in the Qu'Appelle Valley. The hills no longer echo to an Indian maiden's harmony of 136 voices floated across the waters of Katopwa, Echo and Mission Lakes. The singers were school teachers from many Saskatchewan centers; attending a summer course in school music methods. Most of them had had little or no musical training, but by the end of the six-week course some were playing the violin or the cello, others a band instrument, and all played various classroom instruments such as auto harps, recorders, rhythm and single keyboard instruments.

A credit course toward a teaching certificate or a bachelor of education degree, the summer music school is sponsored each year by the University of Saskatchewan, and in past years has alternated between Regina and Saskatoon. This year, in a new venture, the school was held at Fort Qu'Appelle from July 2nd to August 12th.

Designer and director of the course is R. J. Staples, supervisor of music for the Saskatchewan Department of Education. Through music broadcasts, with his song books and unique classroom instruments, and in person, Mr. Staples reaches some 7,000 classrooms in the province. He is the author of a number of music text books, many of which are used in schools across Canada and in the United States.

In addition to Mr. Staples' course in classroom music, workshops were available in choral singing or hand work, primary music, or folk dancing; and for those interested, there was also a short workshop in harmonica playing. Held in classrooms of the new Fort Qu'Appelle public school and in the town hall, the workshops opened a variety of musical doors to the teacher-students taking part. A group of string enthusiasts, instructed by G. D. McPeck, director of music for Coronach schools, plucked and bowed their way from the first single notes to playing familiar melodies in four parts in the band workshops, with trumpets, clarinets, flute, saxophone and trombone, horns and drums, the players experienced the first real thrill of concert work when they graduated from union playing to chord harmony. Some purchased the instruments they were learning to play, said workshop instructor Don Cowan, who is musical director at Sheldon Williams Collegiate in Regina.

Telling a story to music, with good diction, breath control and voice quality, became the objective of the choral singing workshop; and the weekly bonfire song-fests on the shores of the Qu'Appelle lakes were unique musical treats for summer visitors to the valley. A special choral group also entertained patrons at Fort San. The choral groups were under the direction of Miss Marian Atkinson of the Hamilton Conservatory of Music. Miss Kathleen Downes, director of music in the Rosetown schools, was the summer school accompanist. The primary music workshop was directed by Miss Jenny McCallum, supervisor of school music for Moose Jaw.

Many of the teachers brought their families to the valley, combining vacation and school in a summer playground setting that is also becoming a cultural center in Saskatchewan. Visits to the Arts Board Craft Shop, folk-dancing, swimming, tours and boat trips were extra-curricular activities.

A softball league was organized, and though these music educationalists might ignore rock and roll, they did enjoy roller skating. Suitable accommodation for the summer school students and their families was obtained with the assistance of the Fort Qu'Appelle Board of Trade.

Singing, playing of classroom instruments and record listening are not new features in our schools. But the Saskatchewan school music program, through its summer school courses, has added simplified methods and up-to-date teaching aids which have made it possible for many hundreds of teachers who might otherwise have had no musical training, to direct a good music program in the classroom.

Extra-curricular activities

The University of Saskatchewan School of Music Methods Course, with an enrolment of 136, was held at Ft. Qu'Appelle, had a very busy summer of extra-curricular activities.

A summer skating party, singing and weiner roasts by the lake shore, a tour of the Sanatorium and a boat trip around Echo Lake. Four groups visited the Saskatchewan Arts Board Craft Shop in Ft. Qu'Appelle and were given a demonstration of the art of pottery making by David Ross, resident potter and a tour through the interesting craft shop.

Sports activities consisted chiefly of baseball with games scheduled twice weekly. On July 25 two men's teams competed in Lipton's Sports' day and took first prize.

The class newspaper staff put out several issues of a class paper.

A final sing-song and weiner roast was held at Katopwa. Members of the Executive were: President, Mr. H. Robertson, Lipton, Sask.; vice-pres., Joyce Crozier, Moose Jaw; Sec-treas., Sylvia Mooney, Saskatoon; Athletic reps.: Eileen Kozakewich, Meota, Fred Kozakewich, Meota, Ann Reiger, Candiac, Helen Lebo Regina; Charles Woytas, Leptok; Shirley Hewson, Wilkie, Virginia Andriat, Estevan, Joan Weigel, Clair, Wilbert Sinclair, Carlyle. Social reps.: Jack Klein, Auburnton, Lorna Alm, Melville, Margaret Leggett, Sintaluta, Shirley Butters, Weyburn, Mabel Schultz, Teymeyer, Gail Marshall, Saskatoon, Sheila Scarlett, Kyle, Newspaper staff: Dale McIntosh, Quill Lake, Harry Burghardt, Moose Jaw, Mrs. Jean B. Esterhuysen, Grace, Wilcox, Pasqua, Yerna Stagger, Herbert, Peggy Jackson, Willowbrook, Mrs. Gladys Blenkin, Prince George, B.C., Marlene Haberstock, McNutt, Sask.

Dinosaurs impress visitors

A young Swiss couple journeyed an extra 2,000 miles to see where dinosaurs come from. Recently, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Luise of Bergdorf, Switzerland, arrived at Steveston Dinosaur Park and spent three days camping being shown around by Chazler Sternberg of the National Museum. Mr. Sternberg is engaged in searching for a fossil to be used as a park exhibit.

The Luises had been entranced with the dinosaur exhibits in the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto. They met museum director Levi Sternberg, who told them his brother was presently in Western Canada at the site where the exhibits were discovered.

The couple decided to travel to the west before going on to the States for business reasons, so they bought a car and are touring the country.

Needless to say, two of Steveston Park's most enthusiastic supporters will be publicizing Steveston wherever they go throughout the States and back to their native Switzerland. The Bulletin, Brooks, Alberta.

MADELINE LEVASON

Golng by Four Roads

I have just discovered a dandy new excuse to explain why I can't leave to speak French.

Like most non-bilingual Canadians I have long since worn out the standard ones: lack of time for study, lack of practice, timidity, no gift for languages, etc., etc.

From now on my excuse is that there are just too many English sayings for which there are no French translations. Lots of phrases too that can't be switched from one language to the other, word for word, with the help of a dictionary.

My lesson in the intricacies of translation came from my friend Simone, who is very well endowed with this strange lingual gift I lack so sadly.

"You can't translate the words," she says. "It's the ideas. For instance, in English you say 'a horse of a different color,' but in French we say, 'a different pair of sleeves.' You 'beat around the bush.' We 'go by four roads.' You say you do things 'without batting an eyelid.' We say 'with the turn of a head.'"

Now I ask you, how could a dictionary possibly help a poor dope like me with phrases like that? This French language is too darn difficult, especially for a gal raised in the west. For instance, French switches 'sells like hot cakes' to 'sells like hot breads.' Not only that, but when someone departs unexpectedly they don't take 'French Leave,' they take 'English Leave.'

There are lots more examples. In French no one is 'poor as a church mouse.' Instead they are 'poor as a church rat.' When a French gal feels chilly she doesn't get 'goose flesh.' She gets 'chicken flesh.'

I must admit that the translations of these old phrases have a fascinating twist that does nothing to spoil original idea. I sort of like the French version of saying people are as 'alkie as two drops of water,' instead of 'as two peas in a pod.'

I must also admit that my French-speaking friends are very patient and refrain from laughing at even the most screamingly funny blunders and their language does sound pleasant to the ear.

But even if they express the same idea, how could an English-speaking person ever learn all those different French words. It surely can't be so difficult for French-speakers to learn English or how could so many of them manage it, I wonder?

News Report From Edmonton

By Ken Mason
EDMONTON — An uranium rush appears to be developing in the extreme northeastern corner of Alberta. Where it will end is anyone's guess at this point, but people in mining circles say it looks big.

It all came about as a result of work carried out in 1957 and 1958 by geological field parties of the Research Council of Alberta.

The geologists found deposits of molybdenite, important in atomic reactors and in steel hardening processes, and radioactive minerals including high-grade uranium.

A preliminary report on the Research Council's findings was released last week, and the result was a flurry of excitement among prospectors and geologists in Edmonton and other parts of Canada.

The mineral-rich area covers about 150 square miles north of Lake Athabasca, about 450 air miles north of Edmonton. At the time of writing, prospectors were flocking to the area.

Dr. C. P. Gravenor, Research Council geologist, headed the field parties which studied deposits in the area where the Precambrian shield cuts across the northeastern corner of Alberta.

He emphasized that the Research Council report is based only on surface showings and certain "grab" samples of rock which were brought out of the area. He said detailed exploration by prospectors and geologists will prove whether valuable ore is present in commercial quantities.

Even so, the release of the council's report caused a lot of excitement in mining circles here. Prospectors rushed to Research Council headquarters here to grab up copies of the report and examine samples which were on display. Then they made arrangements to fly into the remote northern area for an on-the-spot investigation.

Airlines and charter plane firms reported a rush of business. It was so big, in fact, that some of them couldn't handle it. The charter companies have all their spare aircraft tied up on forest fire operations in northern Alberta.

There also were reports of prospectors flocking into the area from the Beaverlodge uranium mining district a few miles east in Saskatchewan.

One of the most interesting features of the report deals with samples taken from a zone containing highly radioactive bands with molybdenite. Geologists followed the radioactivity for more than half a mile.

An assay of the samples showed 1.03 per cent uranium oxide. This may seem small, but to mining men it's anything but small when you consider the Beaverlodge, Sask., mining empire was built on rocks which assayed around 2 per cent.

It's probably coincidental, but the Research Council report comes at a time when controversy is raging over the route for a railway to provide access to rich base metals deposits on Great Slave Lake in the Northwest Territories.

The discovery of valuable minerals in northeastern Alberta will add strength to the arguments of those who favor a route through Waterways and McMurray in northeastern Alberta.

At the moment, the proposed northern railway is cloaked in considerable doubt. It seemed certain a couple of months ago that the route would go north from McMurray, but residents of the Peace River country in the northwest raised a storm of protest.

Now Ottawa says plans must be delayed in view of the controversy.

This more or less bears out a prediction made by Premier Manning at the height of the dispute, when opposing sides were asking his government to take a stand in favor of one route or the other.

He said his government favors the building of a railway to the Northwest Territories. A big squabble over the route, he said, would give Ottawa a perfect excuse to postpone action on it.

Nothing has been said officially, but word has it that if factions in Alberta continue to fight over the railway, Ottawa might decide to build it north from Manitoba or Saskatchewan. Then what would happen to Alberta's claim to being the gateway to the last frontier?

Besides strengthening arguments for the northeastern route, the Research Council report also confirms a belief prospectors have held for some time about the far corner of Alberta. In 1952, a small staking rush developed in the area. Some 1,300 claims were staked, but no work was done and they were allowed to lapse.

Mining men are hopeful that it will be different this time. Indications are that some big companies are interested, and if this is so there could be some major development work.

Hockett-Stiles Promises Heard in Afternoon Rite

In a late afternoon ceremony at St. Paul's United Church, Edmonton, Miss Marjorie Claire Stiles became the bride of Mr. Darrell Hockett.

The bride, a member of Pi Beta Phi fraternity, is a graduate of the University of Alberta school of nursing, and the groom, a geology student at the U of A, belongs to Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

Rev. Blake Pritchard officiated at the double-ring rite for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar N. Stiles and the son of Mrs. Ferne Hockett, all of Edmonton. Given in marriage by her father, the bride pledged her vows before an altar flanked by standards of pastel gladioli.

For her wedding, the bride chose a slipper-length gown in traditional white. A portrait neckline of beaded lace accented the princess style bodice, and the skirt of organza over taffeta was arranged over crinolines. A corset studded with seeded pearls held her fingertip veil of French illusion in place, and she carried a bouquet of red Sweetheart roses and stephanotis arranged in cascade style.

Attending the bride were Mrs. B. J. Edgell as matron of honor,

Mr. James Adamson was best man, and Mr. Arthur Brown and Mr. Patrick Stiles ushered the guests to the pews. Mr. Kenneth Hilliker proposed the toast to the bride at the reception held in the church hall, following the ceremony.

For travelling, the bride changed into a deep blue cashmere suit with white accessories, and red roses en corsage.

Upon their return from a honeymoon trip to Jasper, Mr. and Mrs. Hockett will make their home in Edmonton.

Northwestern Utilities, Limited

GROWING WITH ALBERTA

... by helping Alberta grow!

In case you've been too busy to notice, Alberta has been "busin'" out all over in the last few years. Its growth is reflected in these gas company figures for 1967 to 1967:

During these ten years the number of customers served by Northwestern has more than doubled — 27,500 to more than 78,000.

And the amount of gas used in the area served by Northwestern Utilities has risen from 10 1/2 billion cubic feet a year to more than 46.2 billion cubic feet — a jump of more than four times.

Much of this increase is due to the fact that forty-five towns, villages and hamlets have been added since 1947 to the number of communities enjoying natural gas service.

The future? All the signs suggest that the demand for natural gas on Northwestern's system will double again in the next 15 years. Our busy, booming province hasn't stopped growing yet.

KEEP THAT PILOT LIGHT BURNING

Almost everyone has shivered during the misery of an unheated home during a sudden summer cold spell. While you wait for your cold furnace to warm up, you huddle by the fireplace or shiver in front of an open oven door.

Be prepared! Keep the pilot light burning all summer. Then your furnace can be turned up to full efficiency in minutes.

The cost is just pennies cheap. Yet the tiny flame spurs your furnace to instant heat at the first sign of a change from summer weather. It also protects your furnace against damp and keeps your whole basement dry.

THE SHAPE OF THINGS TO COME! TOMORROW'S GAS KITCHEN

To give you a preview of "the shape of things to come", here is a complete "gas kitchen" developed by the gas industry to save steps and speed up housework. This dramatic "Multimatic Wall" features foldaway cooking burners, wall oven-boiler, refrigerator, water heater, washer-dryer and warm air furnace — all in one colorful unit 8 feet high and 10 feet wide. What makes it possible? The efficient, compact design of today's gas appliances! So, while the "Multimatic" is still a "dream kitchen", modern homeowners can achieve much the same results with the many fully automatic, space-saving gas appliances and heating units available now from gas appliance dealers.

Camp shelters along Alberta's highways have had plenty of service this summer with the warm holiday weather. One of the most attractive settings for these new highway way-stations is the one pictured above, located a few miles north of Red Deer at Content Bridge on the No. 2 highway. Similar shelters are being constructed throughout the province.

NOW GARBAGE GETS "DOUBLE BURNING"

The secret of smokeless and odorless incineration, available only with a gas incinerator, is "double burning".

In addition to the combustion chamber of the incinerator, there is a second chamber in which smoke and odorous fumes pass over a second flame and are destroyed.

To test the "after-burner" idea, hold a burning match directly over the lighted end of a cigarette and watch the smoke vanish.

Now, in your own basement or utility room, you can burn everything from dinner sweepings to old shoes and soggy vegetable peelings. Nothing remains except a handful of clean ash, and you won't find a whisper of smoke or odor.

SHRINKING MOMMAS

"Canadian mommas are getting smaller."

This sweeping statement was made to me the other day by a Montreal manufacturer who specializes in making, what the trade calls "momma dresses," the fashion advertisements coyly describe them as styles for "the woman with the mature figure."

"Momma dresses" are especially designed and cut to clothe ample proportions. Usually discreet darts, flattering panels and careful details are combined with one objective: to minimize the size of the wearer. Very few pretensions towards high style are ever attempted and all frills or furrows that might draw attention to the figure, are taboo.

My informant, who has been in the business of making "momma dresses" for 25 years, quoted startling figures to prove that his unknown customers from Lethbridge, Alta., to Lunenburg, N.S., have been shedding pounds steadily for the past ten years.

Buyers used to come in here and order dozens of size 26½ dresses for their stores, he explained. "Today the biggest selling size is 18½." He assured me that "this diet business" was the reason for the change.

You can't blame Canadian mommas," he opined. "Everything they read today warns them that extra pounds could cause them to drop dead next time they run upstairs."

I queried others in the trade and found they readily endorsed his theory adding other details to the picture of Canadian mommas counting calories.

"Momma" dresses are on te way out," one manufacturer declared. "Today we make youthful designs and cut them to the larger proportions but even the term half-size is becoming a dirty word." Matrons are so loathe to admit to wearing half-sizes, they are even building up a buyers resistance to them.

A group of momma dress manufacturers, to whom the wishes and tastes of Canadian women are the hard, economic facts of livelihood, recently held a serious conference at which they attempted to invent a new term to describe the half-size.

Although Canadian women's changing sizes and dietary habits are creating new problems for these men, they are not a bit sorry. Pride in the figure and fashion

CARDIGAN SUITS in wool combine practically with the height of fashion. Wonderfully packable and wrinkle shedding they are ideal for travel. Bitter chocolate and warm beige on a neutral ground mark this suit with its all-round pleated skirt. Other details are deep, turned-back cuffs on the three-quarter sleeves, vertical pockets on each side of the front and the wide edging in which the stripes are used horizontally.

CWNA HOLD CONVENTION

Weekly editors and publishers with their wives and families, representing most of Canada's 690 English weekly newspapers, will gather at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto September 4, 5 and 6, for the 39th annual convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association.

The three-day meeting will centre around discussions of the problems facing the industry and sessions will be held with representatives of advertisers and agencies.

Consciousness spell out one thing to them — demand for more clothes. They are all rooting for Canada's slimmer, more fashionable mommas.

and the Audit Bureau of Circulation.

Highlighting the discussions, both formal and informal, will be the matter of better promotion of the weekly newspaper as an important medium for local and national advertisers.

This is expected to bring official sanction by delegates for the inauguration and support of a full-time promotion and public relations department in the CWNA national offices in Toronto.

According to William Telfer, CWNA managing director, promotion of weekly newspapers as an important medium will go a long way towards increasing revenues thereby assisting many weeklies now finding it hard to hold advertising and subscription rates at present levels and still meet rising costs.

Combined circulation of the English weeklies in Canada has now passed the 1½ million mark, Mr. Telfer said.

A number of national associations and companies will entertain delegates at various luncheons and the Government of Ontario will give a dinner.

Among guests expected will be John Thomson, managing director of the Northcliffe group of weeklies in the United Kingdom. He is currently touring Canada.

With normal vision, a person in an airplane 1,000 feet in the air can see about 39 miles if visibility is unlimited.

Anti-rabies campaign quarantine

Discovery of a case of rabies over the week-end in the Mortlach district, about 80 miles east of Swift Current on the main line of the C.P.R., has resulted in the complete quarantine of the town and adjacent area in which all cats and dogs will be vaccinated against the dread disease.

Discovery of the case followed the death of two dogs under suspicious circumstances, veterinarian inspector Dr. A. H. LeClair of the local health of animals division, federal department of agriculture, said. The dogs were the property of American fanciers who are in the Mortlach district training animals for the forthcoming bird-dog trials. Altogether, Dr. LeClair said, there are 41 dogs being trained, indicating that under the circumstances they were all open to infection.

The federal veterinarian replied, in answer to a question, that this is the first case of rabies recorded in the area to his knowledge.

The death of the first dog apparently didn't cause concern, but when the second death occurred, its remains were forwarded to the provincial laboratory where a diagnosis showed rabies had been the cause of its demise and brought instant action from the health of animals division. —The Sun, Swift Current, Sask.

First impressions at Fort McPherson

Ronald Jones, former advertising manager of the Press, who left last month with Mrs. Jones and sons to reside at Fort McPherson, N.W.T., has written the Press telling some incidents of their trip and first impressions of the far north.

After a pleasant day in Edmonton, where they renewed acquaintances with Vic O'Neill (editor of the Press a few years ago) and met his wife, Thelma Johannes, well-known concert pianist, they took the plane next morning for Aklavik (East 3). Here they transferred to a single engine Otter plane for the 100 miles southward journey, which was quite a difference from the big DC-6. By the time the freight was crammed in, they could hardly see each other. Mr. Hyett was on hand to meet them when they arrived at 7 p.m. and conducted them to the Mission House. The hostel was not quite ready for occupancy.

Mr. Jones says: "McPherson itself is nothing like we imagined it would be. I don't know enough about Canada to be a good judge, but I would imagine that the location of the Fort would parallel anywhere in the country where you find trees, foothills and mountains. The Indians are just wonderful. Almost all can speak, read and write English — they're friendly and think the world of their church and Mr. Hyett — despite the fact that he blows them up from time to time. I had only been on the Fort for two days when I was introduced to an old lady who had already procured the finest skins to make a fur cap for me. Shades of Davy Crockett! We had a mid-week church service, quite a turnout and the Indians love to sing — at their own speed which is just one beat ahead of "stop". However, by the end of the service, I had managed to increase the tempo and on Sunday, we went on from there and finished up the service at a fair clip. We had five little Indian girls in the choir and dressed in their white cassocks and little red caps they looked lovely; they have such big brown eyes, long jet black hair and such shy smiles that I'm glad I'm dealing with boys as the girls would be able to wrap me around their little fingers."

"This 'land of the midnight sun' is really fascinating and this perpetual daylight can really throw one for a loop. Quite often I am conscious of the children being under my feet for too long and, glancing at my watch — I find it is 11 or 11:30 p.m. There are a few gardens here and they are looking great. Lettuce, kale, carrots, peas, potatoes, beets and tomatoes, all coming along fine, despite the fact that it has all been grown from seed, straight into the ground (with the exception of the tomatoes) during the past five or six weeks.

"One thing we have appreciated since we have arrived here — fresh whitefish — I had almost forgotten what fresh fish tasted like. All the fish are running a little late this year, but they are coming in now and a lot of the Indians are preparing to take off for the fishing grounds. They may be back at the Fort for Christmas if weather permits and then off they go again on their trap lines until around Easter time. That is why the need for the hostel — so that the children can be looked after properly while their parents are away."

"We have had three film shows at the hostel so far, and there is usually two and sometimes three shows at the community hall each week. Radio reception is zero for as long as I have been here, but I heard someone in Aklavik had a TV set and picked up reception from Fairbanks, Alaska and Winnipeg. However, we do not seem to miss TV at all and the radio just a little — until we get our piano and hi-fi set on the next boat, due August 27. All in all, I think we are going to be very happy at Fort McPherson."

"I realize that this letter has failed to tell you a lot of things you would like to know, so drop us a line when you can and we'll try to fill in the gaps. Very best wishes to all our friends." —The Neepawa Press, Neepawa, Man.

STEER BECOMES STAGE STRUCK

Livestock must also be vulnerable to stage fright.

T-Bone, a steer on display recently at the McLean County Fair, fainted in front of the judges. Owner Sandra Kehoe of Leroy, Ill., claims the steer was not trying to faint, but merely suffered a sunstroke.

The judges passed judgment after T-Bone had been revived with an electric fan. He didn't win. —The News, Rocky View, Alberta.
